How to Treat Cucumber Bugs.

At a late meeting of the American Institute Farmer's Club of New York the question how to treat cucumber bugs was brought up. John G. Bergen said—

"Cucumbers are a great crop with some of the market gardeners near New York. I know men who grow ten acres each of cucumbers on Long Island, who don't do anything to kill off the vine-hugs—they feed them. They put in 30 or 40 seeds in one corner of the hill once week and as many more next week in another corner, and so on till they get three or four, sometimes five, plantings on the same ground. What the bugs don't eat are finally thinned down to five stalks in a hill. It is the cheapest and most effectual mode of getting rid of the bugs. I have tried to kill them with snuff, but I only succeeded in killing the plants, not the bugs. It will keep the spis of of cabbage. No doubt cucumbers are a very profitable crop when set right. There is one large grower near the Narrows who has sold $2,000 to 2,500 worth of cucumbers a day in the best of the season, from a crop upon ten acres. There are two or three farmers who sell $10,000 to $20,000 worth a year of market garden crops from 40 or 50 acres. Some make a good deal of money and some none. Much of the skill is in selling as well as growing."

Prof. Maples.—I used to grow melons, and kept off the bug by boxes covered with muslin. Afterward I found that the muslin did no good—the box was just as good without. Make the boxes of pine board, larger at bottom than top, so as to rest together, when piled away. They are great safeguards from all bugs and gnats. It is a good thing to let the box on, and let the vines grow over the top. I never raise the ground for hills of cucumbers or melons, or in fact, anything else.

How to raise Turkeys.

Will you allow me in former style, through your paper, to give my experience in raising turkeys, for the benefit of your readers? I commenced raising turkeys about three years ago, I never met with any success until the last season, 1856. The winter previous, I wintered one-ton and two hens, and they laid 60 eggs, from which I raised 45 turkeys from 60 hatched. Until the last summer, I never could raise over one forth that were hatched.

My mode of raising them is as follows: I made each hen lay two settings, which they will do without injury if they are well wintered. I set two settings under dung, hill fowls, and the remainder under turkey hens. As soon as they are hatched, I have crates provided and immediately shut them up, and keep them shut up for four weeks, and then let them range anywhere on the farm. I feed them on Indian meal, and keep buttermilk constantly before them. I give them no water except when they have been so often found. These stories will continue throughout the winter year, and will prove the most interesting ever offered to the public.

SPRING AND SUMMER Goods.

The undersigned respectfully inform his friends in the vicinity and the rest of mankind that he has opened

NEW STORE,

In the elegant Store House, just erected in Robt. Morris' County, Pa., where he has now opened large and choice assortment of

Spring and Summer Goods.

Which he determined to sell on such terms as will make him last in this valley, where he is want of such articles.

His stock has been selected with care and will refer to the wants of this community—and without any regard to price. He has a large quantity of fine Linen, cloth, cotton, &c., which he can afford to sell at a lower price than any other store in the country. He has nothing in assuring his friends that evrything sells well in County Stores, can be had at a much cheaper rate than the emporiums.
